School days with face-to-face lessons

From 13th to 29th of January, we came back to our school to have face-to-face lessons. It is lucky because we could go back to school to see our teachers and classmates. There were many funny things during these two weeks.

The funniest thing is that, last week when we were having science lesson, Miss Ho grouped us in pair. My partner is Jessica. We needed to use the iPad and some cards to find the information then write on the book. When we were finding the information, Jessica told me a funny story. Then, we started laughing loudly. Miss Ho felt very strange and asked us what we were laughing about. Then we told her the story.

Also, during the last week we went to school, there was a transparent partition board on everyone's desk. It is an interesting thing because I have never used this before. It is an exciting experience at our primary school life.

Although having zoom lesson can let us sleep longer. I still want to go back to school because at school we can play or talk with our friends and it will be an unforgettable memory in the future.

School days with face-to-face lessons

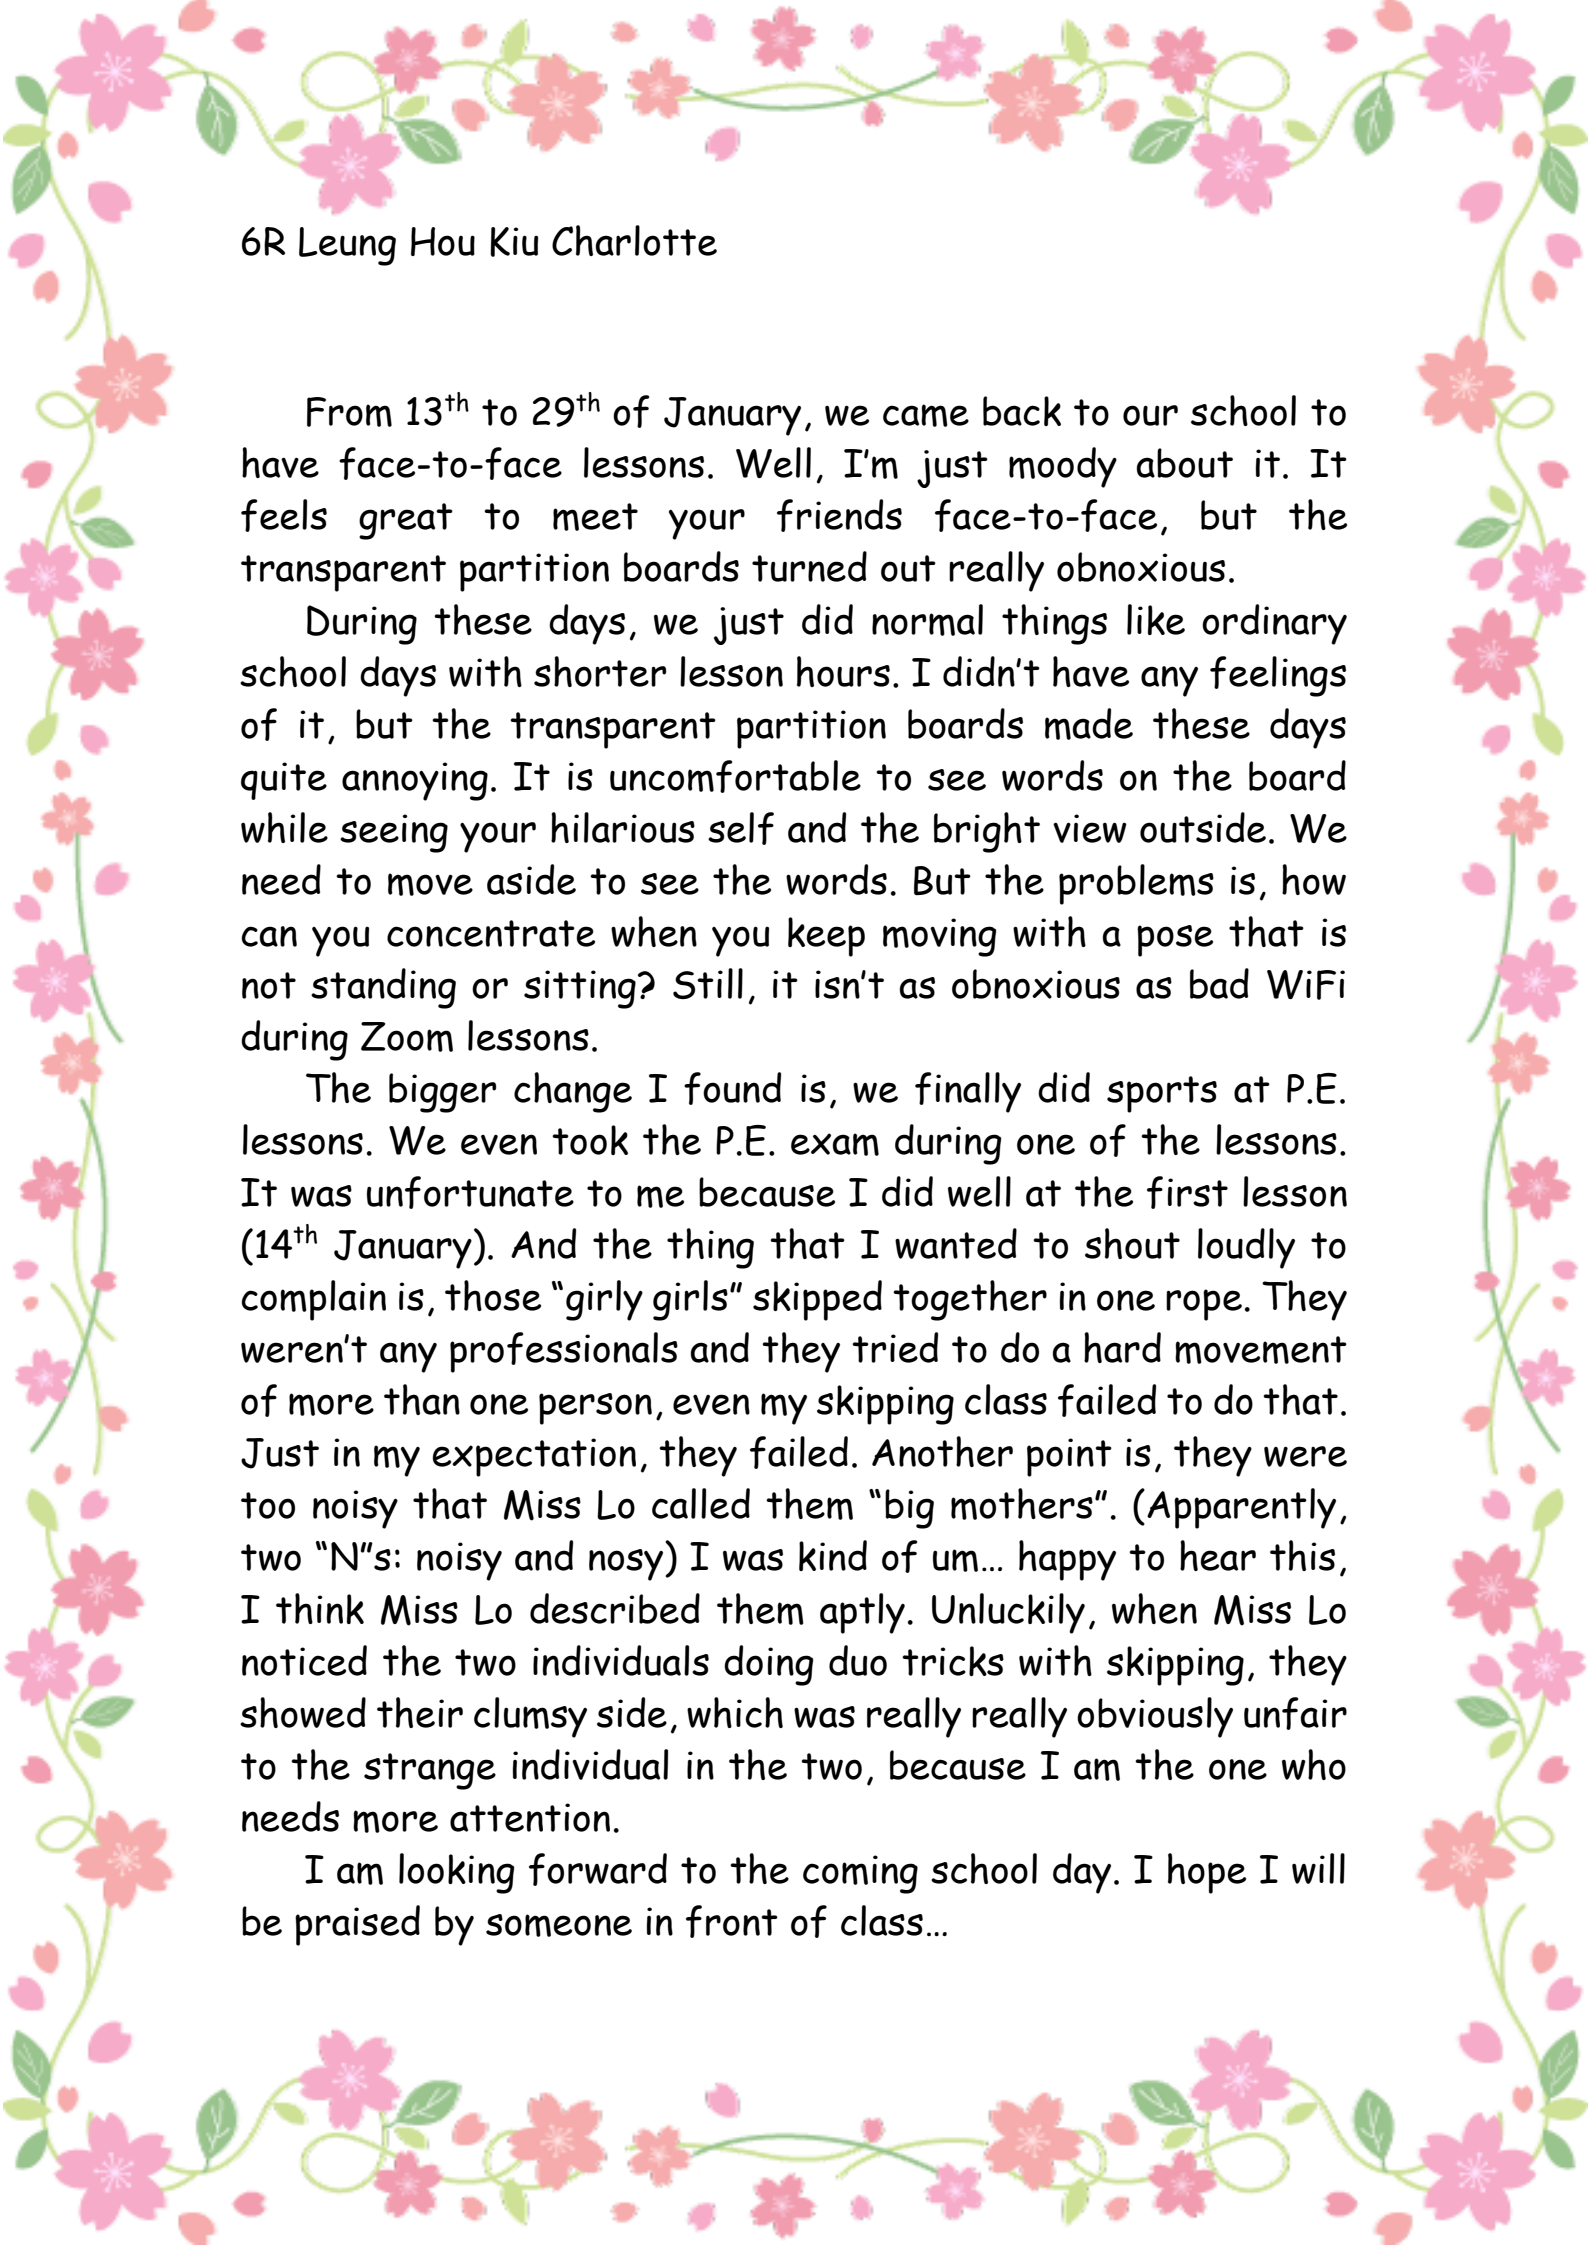

I have already been looking forward to coming back to school since the epidemic started. Luckily, from 13th to 29th of January, my classmates and I were able to come back to our school to have face-to-face lessons.

At school, I could chat with my best friends, but not leaving our seats. We could have group discussions in English lessons and watch videos in Visual Art lessons. Most importantly, we were allowed to play basketball in PE lessons. It was so exciting!

Our school also added transparent partition boards on our desks. (Wait. This wasn't what I expected.) It made us hard to communicate with each other. It is not only used to block respiratory droplets but also used to hang our worksheets for the teacher to collect them more easily.

Chinese New Year is coming. I am looking forward that the epidemic is gone after Chinese New Year Holiday. Therefore, we can all go to school happily - NO masks, NO social distancing.

And, of course, NO TRANSPARENT PARTITION BOARDS!!!

From 13th to 29th of January, we came back to our school to have face-to-face lessons. Well, I'm just moody about it. It feels great to meet your friends face-to-face, but the transparent partition boards turned out really obnoxious.

During these days, we just did normal things like ordinary school days with shorter lesson hours. I didn't have any feelings of it, but the transparent partition boards made these days quite annoying. It is uncomfortable to see words on the board while seeing your hilarious self and the bright view outside. We need to move aside to see the words. But the problems is, how can you concentrate when you keep moving with a pose that is not standing or sitting? Still, it isn't as obnoxious as bad WiFi during Zoom lessons.

The bigger change I found is, we finally did sports at P.E. lessons. We even took the P.E. exam during one of the lessons. It was unfortunate to me because I did well at the first lesson (14th January). And the thing that I wanted to shout loudly to complain is, those "girly girls" skipped together in one rope. They weren't any professionals and they tried to do a hard movement of more than one person, even my skipping class failed to do that. Just in my expectation, they failed. Another point is, they were too noisy that Miss Lo called them "big mothers". (Apparently, two "N"s: noisy and nosy) I was kind of um... happy to hear this, I think Miss Lo described them aptly. Unluckily, when Miss Lo noticed the two individuals doing duo tricks with skipping, they showed their clumsy side, which was really really obviously unfair to the strange individual in the two, because I am the one who needs more attention.

I am looking forward to the coming school day. I hope I will be praised by someone in front of class...

School days with face-to-face lesson

From 13th to 29th of January, we came back to our school to have face-to-face lessons.

During the days we had face-to-face lessons, we had a new friend, "Mr. Plastic Board". At the first time we saw it, we were very interested in it. We used pencils to draw on the board, used our fingers to scratch the plastic board, tried to move away this plastic board, etc.... Day by day, our creativity also made this plastic board more useful. We hanged our worksheets or workbooks on the plastic board and let the teachers collect them easily. In spite of the above advantages, there are some disadvantages. For example, I couldn't see the words on the blackboard because of the glare on the plastic board.

I feel very excited and delighted to be back to school because I can meet my friends in person and my performance will not be affected by any external factors when I am attending the zoom lessons. Hence, I look forward to having face-to-face lessons after the Chinese New Year holiday.
