Graduation Camp

We went for the graduation camp on the twenty-sixth of April. We stayed there for three days and two nights, so we left on the twenty-eighth. The environment is better than how I expected it, I thought it would have bugs all over the place (it actually does) and plenty of insects on the walls but the walls and floor were pretty clean, and the beds were comfy, so it is a nice place.

We did a ton of activities, some memorable ones like frisby-dodgeball and the number-pressing challenge. The two I enjoyed the most are rock-climbing and the farewell party. The rock-climbing session looked intimidating, but it wasn't that hard. But the coach told me that we were running out of time, so I had to go faster. I did, so fast that I slammed myself into the wall many times, but I still managed to ring the bell. As for the farewell party, our teachers told us some meaningful things, and even stories of their past. Each class also got to sing, I didn't like that as much because we sang terribly. I would say the most memorable thing is that light outside the window, even the curtains were dropped! So, it caused me insomnia on the first night.

I felt a little afraid with no family members nearby, but with friends and classmates around, that feeling instantly went away. But Alan was a bit chaotic, to be honest. Overall, I liked the graduation camp, it gave me a whole new experience (with chaotic classmates), and the coaches tried their best to teach us the importance of teamwork. To think that I'm going to be in secondary school in months makes me surprised, yet concerned. I know there are extra subjects, and that's my biggest concern. My second biggest is that, I know that some people are not going to study in the same secondary school, who I can consider a friend. I feel like if I don't keep in contact with them, I'll forget them, and they'll forget me, so I could ask for a way to keep in contact with them. If I have to cheer myself up I would think, "There is a solution for everything in this world."

Graduation Camp

We went to the graduation camp from 26th April to 28th April. We went to PHAB for our camp. We stayed there for three days and two nights. The environment was nice. There was a tuck shop and we could buy snacks there. Also, the canteen was big and the food was great.

We played a game called "Number Punch". You need to hit the card 1-30 in forty seconds and you cannot talk. We thought that it was an easy game. But there was a classmate, he hit the wrong number and talked every time. At last we still finished the game but we were not the fastest one. So we did not win the game.

I felt very excited about the three days without my parents and having the chance to sleepover with my friends. I enjoy the graduation camp very much because I have never slept with my friends. It was a special memory. "There is always someone better than you and there is always someone worse than you." I am nervous and excited moving on to secondary school.

Graduation Camp

We had our graduation camp from 26th April to 28th April in Hong Kong PHAB Association Jockey Club PHAB Camp in Pok Fu Lam. The environment there is nice because there is a good and beautiful view.

In the three days camp, we had a lot of activities such as teamwork training, rock climbing, dodge disk, wheelchair ball, adventure training and farewell. Among all these activities, I enjoyed wheelchair ball the most because I have never sit on a wheelchair before. I think this activity is interesting. Besides these activities, there was one more memorable thing happened. There were a lot of spiders in our room's toilet, we asked Miss Lai to help us kill them.

During the 3 days camp without parents, I feel happy because nobody urged me to do anything. I feel excited having the chance to sleep over with my classmate. Overall, I enjoyed the graduation because it could challenge myself. I am going to move on to secondary school soon. I will miss my teachers especially Miss Sing and Miss Lam! "Don't give up when dark times come." When we encounter difficulties, we should persevere.

Graduation Camp

I went to the graduation camp on 26th April. I felt exhilarating about the activities and my room. It's my first time to sleep with my roommates. We went there for 3 days - 2 nights. It was an ideal place for me. The view was ravishing and I loved to stroll outside and admire the view in the morning. It makes me in a good mood. It's a good start of a day. Do you want to know where it is? It is in Pok Fu Lam, The Jacky Club PHAB Camp.

We played a lot of games about the importance of teamwork. The most unforgettable activity is the number punch. There were 1 - 30 of circle numbers in a room. We could only tap it with the correct ascending order. We have argument when we were communicating with each other, but we solved the problem and won the champion. I like the wheelchair competition the most. The reason is that it is a breathtaking activity when you can get marks for your team and won the competition.

I felt relaxed without parents. I can do my favourite things myself. Overall, I enjoy the graduation camp. It brought many unforgettable memories with my friends. I felt excited to move on to secondary school soon. "Cherish the present happiness" I will not forget this grateful memory.
