

Environmental Problems in China

One environmental problem that China is facing is deforestation.

The reasons for this problem are numerous. Firstly, China has a high demand for wood products, leading to wide spread of logging activities, Additionally, the expansion of making papers has resulted in the clearing of large forest areas. Furthermore, illegal logging and poor enforcement forest protection laws contribute to deforestation.

If no solution is found to address deforestation in China, the consequences could be severe. It will negatively impact local communities and people who depend on forests for their livelihoods, it can also lead to soil erosion, decrease water quality and increase flooding, affecting agriculture and water resources.

Economically, deforestation can negatively impart local communities and people who depend on forests for their livelihoods. It can also lead to soil erosion decrease water quality and increase flooding affecting agriculture and water resources.

In conclusion, addressing deforestation in China is crucial to protect biodiversity.

The Mid-Autumn Festival Holiday

During the Mid - Autumn Festival holiday, I went to China, Luo Hu.

On the first day, I woke up a bit late but that didn't matter much since my brother had his Taekwondo lessons before our trip.

After his lessons, we rushed to the MTR, it was a long trip from Po Lam to Luo Hu but we eventually got there. We then went to our hotel. When we were checking in, I noticed that the lobby was small but when we got our hotel room cards and went in the hotel room, it was surprisingly neat, tidy and kid of big.

We then headed out to eat dinner since it was actually already late, we ate at a hot pot place which mainly served coconut chicken. As I was eating the chicken, I wanted to try the chicken soup in my mouth, I accidentally

I burned my tongue! After dinner, we went to the arcade to plan tor a bit and then went back to the hotel and slept.

The next day, my mom ordered rice noodles for breakfast. It was delicious. After that, we went to the main street, although I have already ate breakfast, the food and drinks were too attracting and yummy and I couldn't resist it! So, I bought some spicy squid skewers and a grape flavoured smoothie with boba tea bubbles and whipped cream on top, it was so good! After I finished my food we went to another arcade that was more crowded and bigger, I then found out that out that there was a cat and dog cafe on the fourth floor so I crazily ran there cause I love cats and dogs. I played with the animals for the whole day but I unfortunately got slightly scratched by a kitten. I then ate at a Korean restaurant and then went back home.

On the last day of the holiday, I wanted to go swimming so I did. This holiday was tiring yet fun! I hope to have more holidays soon.

Mid-Autumn Festival

Yesterday, I had a pleasure to celebrate Mid-Autumn Festival, and it was a memorable experience because I tried to cook the reunion dinner with my mother.

In the afternoon, we went to the market to buy some ingredients for the dinner. It was very crowded but we still bought a lot of food such as vegetables, chicken breasts and some seafood.

As we finished buying the ingredients, we went back home and started preparing the reunion dinner, First, my When I put the prawns into the wok, they jump up suddenly and scared me. My mum laughed at me and my face became red.

'Ring-Ring...' The doorbell rang suddenly. I opened the door quickly and welcomed my cousin Curtis and his family. My mum started serving our guests with delicious dishes, like fried vegetables and curry chicken. They also liked my prawns too! I can't help but I feel a little complacent.

At last, we made our hand-made lanterns and took our bikes to the nearest park. I looked up the sky and the bright full moon shone down. It was brighter than the sun. I was amazed by it and I felt that I am lucky to share my love to my parents and relatives. I am looking forward to the next Mid-Autumn Festival.
